ENGLEWOOD, Colo.--(BUSINESS WIRE)--DISH Network L.L.C. (NASDAQ: DISH) announced today that it launched a value-themed campaign targeting DirecTV customers. The promotion, which runs through April 8, highlights the savings that DirecTV customers receive when they switch to DISH. The campaign challenges DirecTV customers to ask themselves "Why pay more?" for the same programming and service they get with DirecTV. On average, DirecTV customers spend approximately $250 more annually than DISH customers.

"Consumers' purchase decisions are often closely tied to value, and our new campaign highlights DISH's undeniable advantage in price plus technology over DirecTV," said James Moorhead, senior vice president and chief marketing officer. "With DISH, customers get the same channels, shows and the sports they love, and we save them hundreds in their first year. When combined with the industry's most awarded DVR, the Hopper, choosing DISH becomes an easy decision."

To illustrate the value of its service, DISH created a series of short videos asking real consumers what they would do for $250. The series, released on DISH's Twitter and Facebook pages, reveals how far consumers are willing to go in order to get $250. The videos highlight that people do not need to go to extreme lengths to save money; they can save $250 by switching to DISH. The complete video set is available on the DISH Challenge website, as well as DISH's YouTube channel.

How to take the DISH Challenge

DirecTV customers interested in taking advantage of this limited-time offer will need to complete the following steps:

4. If DISH is not able to save the new customer $250 in their first year, the customer will need to submit their last DirecTV bill for online verification.
