

CenturyTel and EchoStar Renew Strategic Partnership

CenturyTel, Inc. (NYSE:CTL) and EchoStar Communications Corporation (Nasdaq:DISH) announced today a multi-year extension of a strategic partnership to continue marketing CenturyTel / DISH Network satellite television service to residential households in states served by CenturyTel.

CenturyTel will continue to manage the customer relationship, allowing customers to order, arrange installation and activate service from one source. Both new and existing CenturyTel / DISH Network customers will continue to have a single point of contact, receive a single monthly CenturyTel bill and qualify for bundled discounts.

"This partnership delivers strategic benefits for both companies," said Shirish Lal, vice president of Marketing for CenturyTel. "It advances CenturyTel's strategy to offer our customers a full suite of products and services that complement our current offerings."

"We are pleased that CenturyTel recognizes the ongoing value of providing the CenturyTel / DISH Network service to its customers," said Tom Stingley, senior vice president of Alliance Management at EchoStar. "We look forward to continued success in providing customers an option that includes CenturyTel's quality telecommunications products, including high-speed internet, combined with DISH Network's unparalleled satellite TV services such as HD programming and cutting-edge, affordable DVR technology."

CenturyTel markets the satellite TV product as CenturyTel / DISH Network, offering CenturyTel customers hundreds of popular, all-digital, TV channels including movies, sports, news, music and the most national high-definition channels in the country. The satellite TV product is offered as a part of a bundle that may include local and long distance telephone service, multiple feature offerings and dial-up or high-speed DSL Internet service.
